CellTrust Welcomes Bryan Glancey as Chief Technology Officer

Enterprise and Mobile Information Security Technology Industry Leader joins CellTrust as Chief Technology Officer

SCOTTSDALE, AZ – May 14, 2014 –CellTrust Corporation, a global leader in traceable and secure mobile communication, announced today that Bryan Glancey has joined the company as Chief Technology Officer.

Bringing with him over 20 years of industry experience innovating, architecting and developing Enterprise and Mobile Information Security technology for Fortune 500 companies and government agencies across the world, Mr. Glancey will lead CellTrust's global technology innovation and development activities.

"We are pleased to have Bryan Glancey join CellTrust as our Chief Technology Officer," said Sean Moshir, CEO and Chairman of CellTrust. "Mr. Glancey's extensive background in Enterprise Level Information and Mobile Security is helping us respond to the mobile collaboration needs of our customers within highly regulated industries."

Prior to joining CellTrust, Bryan Glancey led the Samsung Electronics Co. Ltd, entry into the global public sector as Director Public Sector & Security. While at Samsung, Mr. Glancey helped found the Samsung Government Advisory Board consisting of Information Security leaders from global governments and was instrumental in assisting Samsung in becoming the first handset manufacturer to meet the International Common Criteria protection profile created for mobile devices. Mr. Glancey also previously held the position of Director of Federal Government with Motorola Mobility, Inc. (a Google company). As the co-founder and Chief Technology Officer of Mobile Armor, which was acquired by Trend Micro in 2011, Mr. Glancey was responsible for taking the company from concept to venture funding to product delivery and implementation of large scale contracts.

"Mobility is now the backbone of the modern enterprise, and mobile security and traceability should be ironclad," said Bryan Glancey, CTO of CellTrust. "I am pleased to join CellTrust, a company with security heritage, and have the opportunity to respond to the global regulatory and security challenges facing CIO's around the world."
